THE GUILLOTINA, OR A
DEMOCRATIC DIRGE,

A

P O E M,

By the Author of the "DEMOCRATIAD."

" For here the deadly secret's told,
" Who 'tis that fingers foreign gold;
" That " patriot" strip'd to state of nature;
" Bear strong resemblance to the traitor;
" That each disorganizing scoff'r,
" Will take a bribe if any offer.
" Come then ye 'democratic band,
" Wha yearns to enthrall this favor'd land,
" To Edmund's dismal tomb draw near,
" And vent your lamentation here,
" In groans, as Rachel groan'd at Ramah,
" Hic simus—but—ubique fama."

INTRODUCTION

First, the origin of the present compilation. The best source for the authorship of anonymous and pseudonymous works relating to America in the period 1789-1800 is Evans' American Bibliography. In the present compilation attributions for works published in this country during these years are derived outside of Evans in not much over 20 instances. While Evans is arranged alphabetically by years, which is helpful, the arrangement is by authors rather than by titles, and it does not employ the helpful device of bracketing the author's name when it is supplied by the bibliographer. To these statements we must of course except the last admirable volume prepared by Mr. Shipton covering part of 1799 and the year 1800. As Mr. Shipton wrote in his introduction: "Whenever possible Evans placed anonymous works under author or institution where they are sometimes so effectively lost that even the best dealers quote them to us as 'not in Evans.'"

The major over-all work for Americana is, of course, Sabin's Dictionary of Books Relating to America, which is arranged alphabetically by title and by author. Great as it is, however, it has limitations resulting from the length of time required for its compilation. Sabin published the first of the 29 volumes in 1868. By 1881 and volume 13 he had advanced about half way through the alphabet. Mr. Wilberforce Eames then continued the work part way through the letter S. by the year 1892. After a lapse of 32 years the task was resumed in 1924, and was completed in 1936 under the direction of Mr. R. W. G. Vail. One result of such a long-term process is that works in the early part of the alphabet lack the benefit of much modern research. As to attributions of authorship, where the title is in the latter part of the alphabet all may be well. To the contrary, if the author's name is at the end of the alphabet and the title is in the early part with no attribution given, a later attribution may be difficult to locate. Another result of this process is multiple entries. These are noted in about 80 instances in the present listing, in a number of cases under different authors.

Sixty-eight items in the present compilation were not found in Sabin, and an additional 55 items were included in Sabin without attribution, with the result that something over a quarter of the listed attributions were found elsewhere than in Sabin.

It is of collateral interest that about a quarter of the attributions may be found in Halkett and Laing, Dictionary of Anonymous and Pseudonymous English Literature. It appears from the list of sources in that work that Evans was examined through volume 8 (through 1792) and Sabin through volume 19 (to Simons). A number of other American bibliographies listed in the work have not been re-examined by the present compiler.

The political works whose titles have been selected comprehend American politics in the broad sense, as related to the administration of government. A few works published abroad are included. The choice of the period 1789-1809 is purely arbitrary--to push a little into the relatively unrecorded years after 1800, but not beyond a manageable quota. The period marked the formation of our present government and its rapid progress toward a position of world consequence. Mr. Charles Warren in his "Jacobin and Junto" (1931) in reference to the years 1794-1815 wrote of "the tempestuous politics of those days--an era when political conditions were more heated and violent than at any other period in our history (save possibly immediately prior to the Civil War)" (p. 31). It was a period of widespread use of pamphlets to propagandize, especially beyond the local newspaper areas. The issues raised in the pamphlets under review were important and sometimes pressing, and the discussions often lively.

There seems to have been no social stigma marking a frank appraisal of the weaknesses of others, or a scathing criticism of government, under the cloak of anonymity. The authors of the works listed were quite generally men of prominence and commanding personality. The authors include six Presidents, fifteen cabinet members, twenty senators, thirty-four congressmen, governors, judges, state legislators, clergymen and so forth. There are also considerable numbers of professional writers, publishers or newspaper editors, who produced many pseudonymous pamphlets. These include Bache (2), Callender (8), James Carey (7), Mathew Carey (9), Cheetham (8), Cobbett (27), Coleman (3), Dennie (4), Duane (10) and Noah Webster (12). The author index at the back of the volume gives the life span and a brief biographical identification of most of the individuals named in the compilation.

The volume concludes with a list of the pseudonyms employed by the various authors. Not all of these indicate much imagination, and there are many which employ merely a geographical reference, or which reach back to Roman times.¹ There are numerous exceptions, however, particularly those employed by William Cobbett and his friends and enemies.

The period 1789-1809 saw a number of changes in printing and format. Numbers replaced letters as signatures. Catchwords gradually disappeared, as did colophons. The use of roman numerals in titles had practically ended by about 1800. Wove paper came into general use after that date. A wove paper watermarked 1795 may be found in the pamphlet listed as Evans 34109. Watermarks tended to become rare. The fine English papers marked for export were introduced and later discontinued

1. A list of the pseudonyms employed by Alexander Hamilton in published works (mainly in newspapers) probably includes the following, more or less in chronological sequence: Publius, Sincere friend to America, The Continentalist, Phocion, Caesar, H. G., A Friend, A friend to sober dealing and public credit, Amicus, Catullus, Fact, T. L., An American, Metellus, Civis, Scourge, C., Candor, Detector, Americanus, Pacificus, No Jacobin, Philo Pacificus, A friend to the late army, Ravaillac, Tristram, Vin-dex, Tully, Camillus, Horatius, France, Americus, Titus Manlius, Lucius Crassus, Pericles.

during the period. Machine-made paper had its beginning.
"Hot-pressed" editions began to be sold.

In presenting this compilation, the year-by-year method was adopted as providing the most ready reference and as presenting each work in its contemporary setting. To take care of those cases where the date of the work as well as the name of the author is attributed, there is appended a separate alphabetically arranged short-title listing of such works. In alphabetical arrangement the initial articles "a", "an" and "the" have been disregarded. The sources of the attributions are abbreviated, and the full titles may be found in the list of sources contained in the pages immediately following. Where a source is noted without comment, it means that the author given above it is the one to whom that source attributes the work. Otherwise explanatory comment will indicate the view expressed in the particular source. All the sources citing a work are not always given, but only those which seem sufficient to constitute adequate precedent or which otherwise might be helpful. For example, the Catalogue of the Library of Thomas Jefferson, prepared by Millicent Sowerby, is almost always cited, where possible, for the useful information it contains. The brief descriptions of the works which are given are not based on an examination of all the works themselves. Matter omitted is indicated by . . . , and there is no attempt to follow the original capitalization or punctuation. Where a date is in parenthesis this will indicate either that the date is supplied or (in the earlier part of the period) that the original date is in roman numerals, which seem unwieldy. References to the sources are by the number assigned therein unless a page is indicated.

My thanks are due for the assistance given me by numerous individuals associated with the Yale University Library, who have no responsibility for errors and omissions.

The present compilation is of course not exhaustive. However, it is hoped that it will conserve a measure of nervous energy for bookmen and historians.

FEDERALISM TRIUMPHANT

IN THE

STEADY HABITS OF CONNECTICUT ALONE,

OR, THE

TURNPIKE ROAD TO A FORTUNE.

A COMIC OPERA OR, POLITICAL FARCE

IN SIX ACTS,

As performed at the Theatres Royal and Aristocratic at Hartford and
New-Haven October, 1801.

Ergo non satis est Riso deducere Rictum. MOR. ODE 10.

Arma, Virumque cano. VIRG.

Oberipiununque Contra. IBD.

Is there not some chosen curse, some hidden thunder in the vaults of heaven, red with unconquer'd wrath, to blast the man, who owes his greatness to his country's ruin. CATO.

And the ninth vial was poured out on the great river Connecticut. ANXELATIONIS SECUNDUS.

But fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer, behold the devil shall cut now of you lare prison, and ye shall have tribulation certain days.—But be thou faithful unto death and the reward is life. IBD.
